

Dear Editor,

We can always see that there are abandoned animals everywhere in the street. I want to take this chance to raise the attention of the public on this problem and ask for animal adoption.

I think there are a few reasons why people abandoned animals. People always buy the pets with impulse, they also do not think twice. They do not think about what they have to do if they adopt animals, for example, time, space and money. Some people don't take their pets for a walk everyday or a week. They just put them in the cage. Some of the pet owners are just following the trend. They lose interest on them very soon. The owners also do not take their pets to neutering, so their pets may breed. They cannot feed so many babies, so they abandon them right away.

Adopting animals from the SPCA is a good idea for the owners and the animals themselves. It is because they can give the pets a warm home and you have one more family member. We also can lower the burden of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Animals can play with us and bring happiness. They also can speak to you and hear what you are talking. If we do not adopt them, they maybe destroyed by euthanasia. I think that these abandoned animals are as good as those in pet shops.

I am really frustrated when I see there are a lot of stray animals. We must act now and protect the animals.

Yours faithfully,

Nicole
